LIVING IN NOVI SAD

How to Get There

IF YOU ARE FLYING TO BELGRADE AIRPORT

Belgrade Airport is 18 kilometers away from the Belgrade city centre (Airport-Belgrade) and some 80 kilometers from Novi Sad.

At the airport, you may take the bus line A1 that takes you to the main bus station. The bus stop is right in front of the airport. Bus line A1 is an express service and only makes two stops, at Fontana (Novi Beograd) and the Central railway station (Železnička stanica Beograd Glavna, closed now!). The bus stop at Belgrade's train station is closest to the city centre and Belgrade Bus Station (BAS), the journey time between the airport and this stop is 30 minutes. You can buy tickets on board the bus, the price is 300 RSD (around 2.5 EUR) for a single ticket.

There is also a taxi station at the airport, thus you may take a taxi as well which costs from 1900-2400 RSD (16 – 20 EUR) and the journey takes 20 minutes.

TRAIN TRANSFER to Novi Sad

Although recently this has been the most favourite way of traveling from Belgrade to Novi Sad and the these two cities are better linked than any other two cities in the country having several departures to Novi Sad on daily basis, we would not recommend this kind of transport anymore, due to the fact the Central railway station has been dislocated from its old location (next to the Belgrade Bus station near to the city centre) to a new one which is rather complicated to be reached even for the local population (several bus lines need to be changed).

Since 2019, huge construction works on railways have been conducted, thus temporarily trains do not commute between these two cities.

BUS TRANSFER to Novi Sad

As the most convenient and cost-efficient way of travelling from Belgrade to Novi Sad is by bus. All departures are from Belgrade Bus Station (BAS Београдска аутобуска станица). The central bus terminal is located just southwest of the city centre and consists of two parts. Departures south of the main road and Arrivals north of it. At the bus station, every passenger needs to buy an entrance ticket at counter 12 for 180 RSD (around 1.5 EUR) per person in order to gain access to the bus platforms. A local bus company that offers the greatest number of connections is Lasta.

Buses depart from the central Belgrade bus station for Novi Sad at least every hour, sometimes multiple times an hour, and the journey takes an hour and a half. Ticket reservations are not required, you can buy a ticket before boarding the bus, except on holidays or around specific events, like EXIT Festival week. Do be mindful of your ticket, however, as it will only be viable for a specified bus, as opposed to any bus making the trip.

TAXI TRANSFER to Novi Sad

Various travel agencies from Novi Sad offer transfer from and to Belgrade airport in vans or cars. Price can vary from around 5000 RSD (around 43 EUR) per vehicle upwards depending if it is calculated per person or per vehicle.

Public transport tickets can be purchased at newspaper stands or from the driver depending on the type of the tickets:

- single (around 0.55 EUR), can be bought from the bus driver,
- daily (around 2.36 EUR), can be bought from the bus driver and
- weekly (around 7.13 EUR), can be bought at the Main bus station.

A single ticket can be used only once during the ride and within the zone it is valid for.

Daily tickets are valid for the day on which they are issued, from 0 to 24. There are two types of daily tickets:

- city transport tickets
- intercity transport tickets – valid only for the issued destinations and for the city bus lines.

Weekly tickets can be used for an unlimited number of rides in zone 1 for seven consecutive days.

Line nr 1 connects the centre and the main city beach.

Lines nr 3 and 9 connect the centre and the Petrovaradin Fortress, on the right bank of the Danube, which is inscribed on the UNESCO patrimony list.

MUST SEE in Novi Sad

Petrovaradin Fortress*

Petrovaradin had been in the hands of the Ottomans for 150 years before it was freed from them by the Habsburg Empire in the Great Turkish War. Immediately in 1692 the Austrians went about building an eastern bulwark against the Ottomans: A Vauban-style fortress with dimensions that had never been seen before.

Most of that building is still standing with the system of catacombs and anti-siege tunnels underground.

You can book a tour of the tunnels or content yourself with strolling around the citadel, which has a history museum and restaurants with views of the Danube to die for.

Petrovaradin Clock Tower*

On a square with a glorious view of the Danube and Novi Sad is the fortress's Baroque clock tower, positioned high above one of the gates to the compound.

You might realise that something is amiss about the clock face, as the large hand has been swapped for the small one. This was done so that fishermen way below on the Danube would be able to tell the time from further away.

There are benches on the terraces for you to savour Novi Sad's cityscape, and as it faces west this side of the fortress is a joy around sunset.

Trg Slobode (Liberty Square)*

Novi Sad is at its most distinguished on this square in the centre of the city, almost entirely bordered by historic architecture.

Trg Slobode (Liberty Square) is also referred to as Svetozar Miletić Square, and there's a statue of this 19th-century figure in the middle. Miletić was a former mayor of Novi Sad and a constant thorn in the side of the Austro-Hungarian Empire. His statue is cast in bronze and had to be hidden during the Axis occupation of the city and only replaced after liberation in 1944.

Some other monuments to snap on the square are the Neo-Renaissance town hall from 1895, the Name of Mary Church and the Hotel Vojvodina, the height of luxury when it opened in 1854. Completed in just a couple of years in 1894, it's a Roman Catholic church with a Neo-Gothic design and a product of the Austro-Hungarian Empire: Outside cast your gaze at the spire, patterned with glazed tiles baked at Hungary's Zsolnay manufactory. Inside you can properly appreciate the church's stained glass windows, composed in Budapest, while the main altar in the apse was crafted in Tyrol.

Dunavski Park*

The city's favourite park was landscaped in 1895 where Novi Sad's annual fair used to take place.

In spring and summer it's a sophisticated green space for a few minutes of peace, with a pond and a multitude of tree species like birches, hazelnut, willows and an ancient English oak that has been listed.

In winter you can come for some fun on the park's ice rink.

Novi Sad Synagogue*

A synagogue has stood at 11 Jevrejska (Jewish) Street since the 1700s.

The current one is the fifth version of the building, dating to the start of the 1900s and designed by the Hungarian Art Nouveau architect Baumhorn Lipót. He also built the Jewish municipality and Jewish school buildings next door.

Before the Second World War Novi Sad had more than 4,000 Jewish inhabitants, a population now down to 400. The synagogue is a fine monument to behold from the street, but you'll need to make advanced arrangements if you want to see inside.

Nowadays, it is used as a perfect venue for concerts, as the acoustics are superb.

St George's Cathedral*

This is Novi Sad's main Orthodox church, although you wouldn't know it from the outside.

The architecture is a kind of Baroque revival, as, like much of the city, the original 18th century building was torn apart in the 1848 Revolution.

While the outside is discreet, the interior is exuberant as it gets.

Your attention will be stolen by the iconostasis framing 33 icons and centred on two epic throne icons by the Realist Paja Jovanović.

Fruška Gora

Less than half an hour southeast of Novi Sad the right bank of the Danube becomes mountainous as you venture into pasture, woodland and vineyards, all protected by a National Park. This is Fruška Gora, a massif interrupting the Pannonian Basin.

Riesling and Traminer grapes are grown on these slopes, which 90 million years ago were the shores of an ancient island in the Pannonian Sea.

Families head to Fruška Gora on summer days for walks, camping trips and barbecues.

You can also visit some of 17 orthodox monasteries, most from the 15th and 16th centuries, hidden in the woodland and ready to be tracked down.

<https://fruskac.net/en/locations/monasteries>

Sremski Karlovci*

Another of Vojvodina's prettiest towns is a few moments down the Danube and wrapped in vineyards. Sremski Karlovci is a compact old town, easily tackled on foot and with churches, halls and palaces that survived 1848 unscathed and all have tale to tell.

You can get a taste for the local wine at caves like Podrum Bajilo and the Zivanovic Wine Cellar, which also has a museum to bee-keeping.

But Sremski Karlovci's fame lies in its cultural institutions and Serbian identity. The town became a centre for learning in the late-18th century, when Serbia's first Gymnasium (Grammar School) was established here.

Cultural figures like the poet Branko Radičević were educated here, and the library has one of the greatest archives of the Serbian written word in the world.

EXIT Festival*

Much more than just a music festival, EXIT began at the Petrovaradin Fortress in 2000 as a protest movement against the government of Slobodan Milošević, who was overthrown in October of that year.

As far as music goes, what began as mostly electronic has embraced every other genre, from hip-hop to folk, reggae, metal and alternative rock. The roll-call of bands and artists to have played EXIT is staggering and includes Snoop Dogg, the White Stripes, Nick Cave and The Bad Seeds, Morrissey, Patti Smith, Massive Attack and many more.

The festival lasts for four days at the start of July: There are three main stages, one for rock and pop, another for dance and finally one for hardcore and metal, and many other small ones covering alternative types of music.
